HISTORICAL HOUGHTON

"Faith of Our Fathers Living Still!"

As the magnificent old hymn echoes and re-echoes each student unconsciously squares his shoulder and lifts his chin.

"Faith of our Fathers"—In true sincerity we ask—What was the faith of our fathers? We hear again and again of the traditions, ideals and the heritage of Houghton College. What are the ideals of Houghton College? What is her heritage?

We believe that most of the students and perhaps many of the alumni are not aware of the glorious heritage that belongs to us. Therefore we have endeavored to include in our Boulder a brief sketch of Houghton's history. Probably some of the facts that we shall present will be inaccurate and perhaps we shall not mention some work that should be recognized. We owe the material that we possess to men and women who have recalled to the best of their ability this early history. Doubtless there are others who could supply us with further information. As it has been impossible to secure such data we are here presenting to you our best account of "Historical Houghton."

To understand properly and sympathetically the traditions of Houghton it is necessary to know something of the life and work of her founder.

Willard J. Houghton was born July 19, 1825 and died April 21, 1896. His birthplace is designated on our campus with a befitting marker. He spent his youth on a farm. Neighboring farmers were impressed by his strict Sabbath observance even in his farm work.

In 1876 he built the house in Houghton village where Mrs. P. S. Bowen now lives. He spent the remainder of his life in this home. Relieved of his strenuous duties on the farm he now turned his attention almost entirely to active church work. At first he worked without being ordained believing that he might be able to do more good in the capacity of a layman. He finally decided that this was an error and was ordained into the Welseyan Methodist Church.

The stories of his ministry are the stories which we feel all true ministers of Jesus Christ should be able to recount. Long trips into the hills preaching, teaching and praying made up his busy life. He was most deeply interested in the Sunday School, a phase in his character which probably endears him most in the hearts of all Houghton Students. He loved young people and was interested and eager to help them. Invariably this fact stands out when anyone is interrogated concerning him. He was never to pre-occupied or involved in adult affairs to stop and pat a child's head or tie his boot or perhaps just to greet him by name. One dear lady old in this vicinity counts among her dearest treasures some Bible cards which Mr. Houghton presented to her. Perhaps some of you who are reading this account may have some of these cards. We envy you your treasure. In one way or another he aided twenty-six young men to prepare for the ministry.

In the college office is a very interesting and valuable book. It is the account of the origin of Houghton Seminary in Willard Houghton's handwriting. In it there is a careful account of all the money taken in and paid out of the treasury. The book is well written and the bookkeeping is worked out meticuously. The whole account of the founding of the seminary covers only one page and it is certainly not an autobiography. In fact it minimizes his work to the last degree.

HISTORICAL HOUGHTON (Continued)

The idea of Houghton Seminary originated in 1882. A Wesleyan Methodist Church was to be dedicated at Short Tract. Many leaders of the church gathered for this ceremony, D. S. Kinney and W. J. Houghton being among the number. It was during their visit here that Mr. Kinney voiced the following proposal to Mr. Houghton.

"We need a school in Western New York as it would be a central place where we as a church could school our children away from the environment of the large towns and cities. And said that Houghton would be a good place as it was free from the evils of Large towns and cities. Also that if I would take hold of the work he would do all that he could to put an endowment on it so as to make it easy for the poor and an object for our people to send their children from a distance to their own Christian School."

Then follows an account which makes us proud to call ourselves Houghton Students. He recounts that after prayer and consultation with D. S. Kinney and Rev. H. Warden and friends in Houghton the work was begun.

The money was raised by subscriptions and on February 3, 1883 the first subscription was taken in the Houghton Church. Within a month $1,000 had been raised in a five mile radius of Houghton. Among the men who carried on this work were Rev. D. W. Ball, W. J. Houghton, Alonzo Thayer and John Parker.

Œ

In April 1883 petition for incorporation papers was completed at Eagle Harbor with the following charter members. W. J. Houghton, D. W. Ball, H. T. Bease, W. Daughty, R. T. Dutcher, J. S. Benton, G. W. Sibbley, F. M. Mosher, B. Laughlin, B. A. Hammond, E. R. Weaver, A. Thayer. The grounds for the old seminary building was a tract of land of eleven acres donated by Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Tucker. R. T. Doty paid the first money into the building fund. In April 1883 ground was broken by Alonzo Thayer and Rev. D. W. Ball who had charge of excavating for the foundation and bringing water to the grounds.

The entire church was exceedingly interested in the project and in their spring conference in 1883 subscriptions for building and endowment came up to about fifteen hundred dollars. This amount seemed to be sufficient to warrant beginning the work so the job of building Houghton Wesleyan Methodist Seminary was let to Mr. Armstrong at Cuba. C. P. Lapham was given the contract for stone and brick work—and Walter Arnold did the inside work.

Soon after the contracts were out the crops were blasted. Almost all of the subscribers were poor farmers and in the fall of 1883 due to the inability of the people to meet their subscriptions it looked as though the whole project must fail. But in W. J. Houghton's words "Time would fail to speak of the many interesting providences connected in the starting of this school. Heaven seemed to smile on it from the beginning."

So in the General Conference at Syracuse eight hundred dollars in cash was raised and the work was able to go forward. Accordingly in September, 1884 the building was partially finished and it was thought best to open the school. It might be interesting to note that President J. S. Luckey entered in December of this year and he tells us that Professor Kennedy was at the head of the school. Luther Grange acted as his assistant. Miss Alice Boardman was a teacher and Miss Mary Depew was study hall attendant. Miss Davis had charge of the primary department.

Mr. Houghton kept a careful account of all the subscriptions and we find that he was one of the most generous contributers. On going through these lists we are again impressed by our great heritage. Some of the sums are pitifully small and we wonder who that hard working farmer was who gave his lifty cents, sixty cents, seventy-five cents to the support of an institution where his children and his children's children might secure a Christian education. Collections taken up in the churches ranged from one dollar and thirteen cents, six dollars and one cent and so on. We find one subscription of five cents credited to Elton Boardman. Perhaps that was the five cents with which the child had expected to buy sticks of candy. How many people have prayed and labored and denied themselves in order that a school might exist wherein the "faith of their fathers might reign supreme!" We feel that it might be well to quote at this time from W. J. Houghton:

"Since this time many have given just as worthy to be credited in carrying on this work and verily, verily they will have their reward in the world called Heaven."

"Heaven continued to smile" upon the school and in 1905 the original building was inadequate. Also the hill was underlayed with quick sand and this had had a detrimental effect on the buildings. But the question was: Where should the new buildings be located A. W. Hall and A. T. Jennings became interested in the work and through their efforts the expansion project was forwarded.

In 1903 the Lockport Conference had purchased a camp ground. Sylvester Bedford negotiated the purchase and in order to secure the camp ground he had been obliged to buy both the site of the present camp ground and our campus. Mr. Bedford farmed the campus at first but finally had it surveyed into lots. He gave the first lot to Clark Bedford who built the house now occupied by Ambrose Moses. In 1905 the educational society took over a small part of the land and the building was started. The bricks for the building were burned on the grounds in about the place where the present tennis courts are located. Silas Bond was principal of the school the last year that it was on the other hill and his work did much toward building up Houghton.

It would be impossible to close a history of Houghton College without including the work of President Luckey—"The man of the hour." Previous to his work the institution had been Houghton Seminary. The Seminary now became outgrown and so President Luckey took the reins with a larger vision of the Houghton College. Along with the advancement of educational standards, however, President Luckey has been true to the ideals upon which W. J. Houghton builded the Seminary. The College received its permanent charter from the State of New York in April, 1925. President Luckey has conceived and brought about a college emphasizing Christian Character.

Houghton's History is the history of a Christian school, a history of sacrifice, devotion and service. It is an institution conducted and supervised by a body of men and women who have caught the vision of Christian service and who carry on the work so nobly inaugurated by its founder, Willard J. Houghton. We believe that the success of Houghton will ever be reckoned by the degree of her fidelity to the principle of her godly founder and her integrity to the—

How swiftly these years in Houghton have flown. We, the class of '30, find ourselves standing on the brink of a new life full of opportunities, responsibilities and memories. Over us creeps that unmistakable, sad feeling of loneliness which is always present when one knows that they are about to leave friends, home and familiar places.

Our mind turns back to the Fall of '26 when we first came to Houghton. The assigned tasks were difficult, but 'ere long the friendly spirit of our chosen school overcame the strangeness.

The class of '30 have been united by a common purpose to make their class the best in the history of Houghton. We have helped to uphold the splendid ideals for which she stands and we love our school as only her Alumni can. Time alone will show the extent of what Houghton has done for us, and we the Class of '30, can and will express our gratitude to her by upholding her ideals and supporting her long after we have ceased to wander through her halls.

We traveled through two happy, care-free years of Houghton College looking forward to this our Junior year with Happy anticipation of a year of greater joys. Alas! We find our path blocked by an enormous obstacle in the shape of the Boulder. However, not even a Gibraltar could stop us and so by careful maneuvering we went over this obstacle and found ourselves confronting the Junior Senior Banquet. Memories of our "Soph" Banquet hindered us somewhat at this point. However, we look forward to Senior "skip" day with the fond hope that we may co-operate with the Seniors to the fullest extent toward making it a memorable event in our class annals.

A wholesome, happy and determined group wended their way in the September sunshine back to Houghton, the Sophomores, Class of '32. The new school year would demand and receive their best. They lost no time in organizing, and soon began their activities as a class.

This class takes pride in the fact that they have by far the largest enrollment of any Sophomore Class in the history of the college. How very obtrusive they might feel if there were not within their ranks an amount of talent and worth corresponding to their number. They have representatives holding prominent places in the ranks of high scholasticism, on the Star Staff, in the Glee Club, among the Christian Workers, on the Purple and Gold basketball teams and in other branches of athletics and smaller clubs.

The Class of '32 is mindful that each of them is now making preparation for his life work, and it is a common desire that their lives may truly represent the institution which they are now privileged to attend. They look forward to two more happy and active years in Houghton College.

FRESHMAN CLASS

We are the class of '33 In Houghton University; We're working now for a degree B. S., M. A., or Ph. D.

At registration we were green And we presented quite a scene; As we marched in before the Dean, But through it all we kept serene.

The next day we began our work And we were cautioned not to shirk, 'Twas then we first saw Soph'mores smirk And we were let down with a jerk.

One night we Frosh were entertained And many stranger's names we gained; We well remember how it rained And yet no one of us complained.

Our class has done some noble deeds, We've satisfied our campus needs. Though we may have looked like hayseeds At all events, we pulled the weeds.

We had a tug-o-war one day Those pesky Sophomores were our prey; To win that war for us was play They tried in vain to win the fray. The Juniors took us for a stroll And when we all had reached the goal They gave us each a dog and roll And sent us off without a toll.

Our Professor Wright is all right, Of all our troubles he makes light We keep him busy day and night And he keeps us in his sight.

When we had spelling every day Then many perished by the way, Others "came to" but not to stay; Ah, how to spelling tests delay!

Two days a week our caps we wore Or we were stopped at the chapel door To argue with a Sophomore; This whole performance made us "sore."

In Athletics we all did shine, Our boys as champs were superfine; For rooters all along the line I'm sure we never need to pine.

Now some are purple, some are gold And some are young and some are old, But after all the tale is told We as a class our place will hold.

Russel Frase Doylestown, Ohio Graduate of Short Theological Course

Not for the sake of the gold, Not for the sake of the fame, Not for the prize would I hold Any ambition or aim; I would be brave and be true Just for the good I can do.

Give me the thrill of the task, The joy of the battle and strife, Of being of use, and I'll ask No greater reward from this life. Better than fame or applause Is striving to further a cause.

THEOLOGICAL DEPARTMENT

The Theological Department was instituted in 1883 under the name of the Bible Training Class and with the purpose "to assist young men and women in their preparation for gospel work." It was the result of the untiring effort of Rev. W. J. Houghton, who, for a time, raised the money to meet the tuition cost of pupils taking the work. Twenty students registered the first year.

Rev. B. S. Laughlin conducted the department for four years. In 1892 Rev. J. L. Benton took over this work. During the three years of his leadership the department grew to thirty-four in number, developed a complete course of study, became known as the Theological Department, and received, instead of a brief notice, eleven pages in the catalogue. Since that time the Department has developed steadily under the leadership of such men as Dr. J. M. Bedford, Rev. E. W. Bruce and Rev. J. J. Coleman. At the present time the Rev. F. H. Wright and Rev. C. B. Whitaker head the two departments of the work.

CHRISTIAN WORKERS

Price Stark				President
George Osgood .				e-President
Harriet Storms .				Secretary
Williard Dekker				Treasurer

Out of a student body numbering about three hundred and fifty, seventyfive individuals are engaged in practical Christian work under the organization of the Christian Workers. However, the real purpose of this group is not membership, but rather quality of Christian service which it may render to the College and to the surrounding communities. It aims to develop through practical Christian work, the abilities and talents of each member.

During the Spring and Fall months of each year a number are chosen to hold meetings in various churches of nearby towns and villages. These groups take charge of the entire service, furnishing a leader, preacher, song leader and instrumental and vocal music. Many have found salvation through the invitation to accept Christ which is always given at the close of the gospel message.

Everyone who allies himself with this organization thereby signifies his desire and purpose to be of benefit to God and humanity by putting forth an earnest, personal effort toward the salvation of souls.

STUDENT VOLUNTEERS

The "Volunteers" of Houghton College are a group of students who are interested in the mission field. This organization aims to create a deeper missionary zeal in the hearts of those who are looking forward to the time when they shall be able to work in lands where the gospel is unknown.

The Houghton "Volunteers," in conjunction with the Mission Study Class, have been making a thorough study of the beginnings of the missionary work of the Wesleyan Methodist Church in Africa, India, and Japan, as well as of the home mission work. Reports are made on the life and work of the missionaries who labored in these places, many of whom have been students of Houghton Seminary and College.

As we have learned of the sacrifice of those in past days, and of the ones who are in the field at present, our hearts have been stirred. We have been encouraged and strengthened, and we believe that from our number some will go forth to make known to lost souls in the uttermost parts of the earth their Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ.

SCHOOL OF MUSIC

No single period in the history of the Music Department has seen more progress than the current year. Three years ago the Department received recognition. The State gave the College the right to give major credit in the College department for music besides permission to award State diplomas to those who successfully completed the course of public school music as outlined by the Department of Education. Six Seniors receive these diplomas this year.

The Piano Department under the very able direction of Miss Ella M. Hillpot assisted by Leo B. Lawless has placed in our student body many capable and promising pianists. The department boasts of eighty students.

The true worth of Professor Herman Baker as director of the Department of Voice cannot be expressed in a few words. Capably assisted by Miss Ruth Zimmerman the advancement of the department has been pronounced.

The new Department of Violin under the direction of Miss Maxine Morgan has proved to be a profitable addition. The department features a violin orchestra.

Two fine Glee Clubs, an Orchestra and a Chorus offer students many enjoyable and prosperous hours. Houghton College is exceedingly proud of her School of Music.

The above is a picture of those who were members of the Chorus which sang the cantata "The New Born King" by Benjamin Loveland, presented a short time before The Houghton College Chorus now numbering one hundred thirty-six voices is composed of students of the college the Christmas holidays. The students who sang the solos were: Harriet Storms, soprano, Mildred Stevenson, contralto, Leon Hines, first tenor, Devello Frank, second tenor, and Theos Cronk, baritone. Wesley Gleason acted as accompanist with Aleda Ayers at the second piano.

Although the Chorus has been organized only since 1926, its worth and value have been felt by many, for it has proved itself to be of great interest and benefit not only to those who take part, but to those who listen. It was organized and is capably directed by Professor Herman Baker, Director of Voice and Choral Music.

MEN'S GLEE CLUB

Among the many organizations found in Houghton College, those pertaining to the Musical realm are highly significant. Without doubt, the Men's Glee Club has won for itself high rank in this realm. Under the leadership of such a capable and highly commendable director as Professor Herman Baker has proven himself to be, this group of college men have gained for themselves and for the college praise and honor that such an organization should have.

The Glee Club consists of twenty young men, their director and the accompanist. They present a very high type of program to their audiences, in concert form, and too, willingly furnish Sunday evening Sacred concerts, in the neighboring communities.

A great deal of praise is to be given Professor Baker, for the results which he is obtaining by combining his leadership, a fine spirit of co-operation among the young men, they are able to present to their audiences, programs of true musical merit.

GIRLS' GLEE CLUB

This year marked the formation of a new musical organization in Houghton College, a Girls' Glee Club, composed of thirty-two members and under the able direction of Miss Ruth Zimmerman. They had for their aim throughout the year, the desire to enlarge and enrich musical experience through artistic interpretation of good choral music.

Their calendar of special activities was headed by a Christmas program presented on December the 19th. Each individual gave her best and the result was a splendid ensemble of clear, sweet tones and delicate shading. A superb climax was reached in the final number, "Noel of the Bressan Waits" arranged from an old Bressan Melody.

The other principle activities participated in during the first semester were a Christmas Pageant, "In the Fields of the Shepherds" and the Library Benefit Concert. For the latter the Club sang Harris' "Echo Song" and "My Creed" by Garret.

The second semester was spent in increasing the repertoire and preparing for concert work.

The first semester there were fifteen members of our class. In January we lost four members but our membership was increased by seven, making a total of eighteen the last semester.

Our first social event was in October when we joined the Seniors in a weiner roast down by the Genesee.

We resort to the historic method of selling candy to fill the treasury with the Junior-Senior Banquet in view.

Being a very conservative class we are reserving our social events for our Senior year. Our members are few but we boast of quality not quantity.

Toward the last part of September our class elected our officers and chose our class mother, Miss Molyneaux. At our second class meeting we chose our class colors, blue and silver, and displayed them in the High School study hall.

Our first party was on Hallowe'en when our class joined with the rest of the classes on the fourth floor of the High School building. As we entered the High School building we were blindfolded, we were then led up several flights of stairs and compelled to walk over a stepladder and a set of bed-springs. When the blindfold was removed we found ourselves in one of the new rooms. The memories of this party will linger in our minds for years to come.

You will hear of this class later as we have two of the most interesting years ahead of us.

The Freshman Class of '29 started the year with 12 members but in the beginning of the second semester we gained one more. We are a group of boys and girls striving to be ready for whatever positions life may bring us. Our motto indicates we are very green but only green things grow. We have had a very good time this year. In October we had a Hallowe'en party in the upper part of the High School building with the rest of the classes. A little later we were invited to the Markee Cottage for a party given by the Markee girls.

We have had a very good year together with Latin Conjucations and Declensions and Algebra's X's and Y's, yet we have succeeded very well.

FIRST PRIZE POEM

There is a strange ship sailing Softly out of the blue. A wondrous ship— A white-winged ship— My ship of dreams come true!

Softly the white ship is sailing, Through a drift of golden days Strange-laden ship, Strange-cargoed ship, In the midst of a golden haze.

Slowly the strange ship is sailing Back to the infinite blue. Jewel-bright ship, Wondrous, white ship— My ship of dreams come true!

FIRST PRIZE ESSAY

Every romping, red-blooded boy has his Napoleon, his Washington, or his Caesar, who either conquered the nations of Europe, led his nation to independence, or crossed the Rubicon. In shaping ideas about this hero and his deeds, he forms such overdrawn opinions that he has to alter them greatly before he passes out of his teens. Just such an up-setting of opinions I experienced regarding my ideas of military decorations. When but a boy, I was infatuated with soldiers, and in my childish fancy expected to become a famous soldier who would roam over the seas and around the world. Yet not every soldier conformed to my ideals of a genuine hero. Of all men Colonel Theodore Roosevelt alone met exactly the requirements of a soldier, since to me his exploits spelled character, chivalry, endurance, loyalty-in fact, he was my Launcelot. I did not know then whether he was decorated or not. Indeed that did not matter, for in my imagination I had him adorned with the highest medal that the United States could ever give. If anyone ever won my admiration, he had to be as near like Roosevelt as possible. Whenever I heard of the decoration of a soldier or an officer, I thought of him as a "Teddy," a man who was able to pass successfully through endless dangers.

With this childhood idea of heroism still fresh and vivid in my mind, I stood at last with my own beloved regiment in a battle-scarred field in France, while a French General read the French Army citation for our regiment and then placed the Crois de Guerre with Palm on our regimental colors, as well as on our colonel. Poising there at rigid attention, I thought of Roosevelt and felt that at last I had reached his counterpart, for our decoration was no ordinary one. Had we not written one of the most brilliant pages in the annals of military history by preventing the crossing at certain points on our front, as on either flank the Germans, having gained a footing, pressed forward?

Surely, the cost of this recognition of ours was dearly paid for. We had rendered such service for decoration as I had considered men always had to give. For hours we were almost surrounded on three sides with toothand-nail fighting, so that with rifle-fire and bayonets we had to repulse attacks in three directions. Still standing fast in the face of these streams of lead and iron from the enemies' machine guns and artillery, we shattered two German divisions and threw them into confusion. Then by making counter-attacks at critical points and by walking over our own dead and wounded we surged forward and broke a hitherto impregnable line of men, thereby saving the gateway to Paris. These deeds, comparable to the old Trojan exploits, I considered prerequisites to decoration.

DECORATIONS (Continued)

While I was still gloating over this remarkable feat of ours and while in my imaginations I was passing myself off as a Roosevelt the Second, a startling and cowardly incident occurred, which turned all my thoughts of glory into ashes.

Lieutenant X was riding with Private A on an ammunition truck. A German observation balloon saw the truck and immediately notified the nearest gun to try for a hit. The truck, speeding down the road as fast as the rough roads would permit, was surrounded by falling shells. Suddenly, in the midst of all this dangerous shell-fire, Lieutenant X ordered Private A to stop. As the truck with a jerk came to a halt, the Lieutenant jumped out and crawled under its body for protection. The poor officer, bewildered and badly frightened, did not realize that a truck loaded with explosives is a flimsy protection, especially when it is apt to be struck by a shell at any moment. Nevertheless, there he was, curled up beneath it. Another officer, ignorant but undoubtedly honest, having seen the Lieutenant under the truck, recommended that he be awarded a medal for his undaunted courage and bravery exhibited in repairing a truck under heavy shell-fire. This unmerited placing of rewards impaired the glory of decorations for me. Perhaps my very Ideal, too, had been likewise undeserving of my laurels to him. How could I know? How could anyone tell who was justly decorated?

Shortly after this incident of false heroism another questionable situation occurred. A colonel, well-known to me, ordered a sergeant to make some retreating men go back to fight. Then the colonel calmly returned to his dug-out, wherein his safety lay. But the sergeant, whom the colonel had commanded to carry out this order, with drawn pistol drove these formerly retreating men back onto the front line amidst the continuous uproar of falling shells, flying shrapnel, and the ever present machine gun and rifle bullets. Ought not this sergeant to have been decorated? But he was not! The well-protected colonel in the dug-out was the recipient of the award.

As a result of this second jar to my sense of justice, my opinions of decorated men had a thorough transformation. After this I had to know that a genuine feat was chronicled by the wearing of a decoration.

To my great surprise I was to have still another experience which showed me the unfairness sometimes used in the distribution of honors. Contrary to what I had already seen, some men although they had performed brave feats, recognized as such by all, had never received a citation, even after being promised one. To prove this truth I shall give an account of the experience of a young man with whom I am well acquainted.

One very dark night "somewhere in France" a corporal silently slipped through the trench gathering his little band of men to make a raid on the enemies' line to bring back, if possible, a prisoner or some information.

DECORATIONS (Continued)

In this group of men was young Jack, a private, as yet unknown for any deeds of daring. The group went over the top in the well-known V-formation. When they had advanced about a quarter of a mile into the enemies' line, the enemy sent up a flare which bathed everything in radiant light. The men in the patrol lay on the ground as still as death, not daring to breath for fear of detection. Immediately through this ghastly light the enemy sent a scorching, withering fusillade of bullets toward each strange, groping form revealed by the light of the flare. Though the men in the patrol heard the sound of bullets striking living flesh, yet there was not a single outcry, not a movement, not a sound save the continuous roar of cannon intermingled with the rat-a-tat of the machine guns.

When the firing ceased only two men were wounded, the first of whom was Private Jack lying there unconscious. The corporal gathered the others and set out hurriedly for the home trench. They had just started back when from the darkness came the pitiful plea of the second dying man who begged for them not to forsake him. But the unmoved corporal only sputtered, "Let him stay; he'll die anyway. We can't be bothered with him."

When Jack regained consciousness, he heard the groans of the comrade who had been left with him. Jack tried to move but he could not. A terrible sore spot was on the top of his head; his face was covered with blood and dirt, and for the first time in his life he found himself absolutely paralyzed from head to foot. Realizing that it meant death to stay where he was, he began to try to move by rolling over. The other man hearing him move cried, "You aren't going to leave me, are you?" Finally, after continuous and painful effort, Jack succeeded in rolling over to his wounded friend. The sight that met his eyes was one never to be forgotten, for there sat his buddy, bolt upright, holding his entrails in his hands. Realizing with anguish and regret that he could do nothing for his friend, he started a second time to try to move his arms and legs, so that if possible he might get back to his own line before daylight. In the process he succeeded in rolling again, and as he was on the top edge of a steep hill, he continued to roll down helplessly until he ended up in a hole, landing on the top of his sore head. There he lay unable to move, while excruciating pain coursing through his body added to his already unbearable agony of hunger and thirst. Suddenly he passed into a dazed slumber.

As the clouds of darkness were drawn back to reveal the dawning light of another day, the penetrating rays of the sun sent the life of consciousness into the paralyzed body of Private Jack. He opened his eyes upon a sight never to be forgotten. Behold! two carnivous looking German soldiers with drawn pistols stood at his side to greet him. Immediately with a flourish of authority backed up by cold steel, they said, "Be quiet; don't move. We will not take you prisoner, for we have come from the States only a few months ago. If you will remain quiet and under cover we will bring you food and water every night until you are found either by your own men or by ours." After placing him in a comfortable position they disappeared.

Unable to move, burning with pain and fever, and nearly dying for a drink, Private Jack lay in his little hole for three days and nights. During the day he entertained himself by watching the movements of the Germans in the valley below him. As well as he could he made careful note of the formation of the enemies' fortifications and of their strength.

On the third night while Jack was asleep, a stone, loosened by some one in an American patrol on the top of the hill, rolled down and struck him on his sorely bruised and blood-soaked head. What Jack said the next few minutes cannot be recorded. The patrol upon hearing him knew that only an American could express himself in such a manner, and so they quickly but silently slipped down to his side and very tenderly carried him back to his own line.

After he had received first aid and had been made as comfortable as possible in the dressing station, he requested that he be allowed to speak to the captain, in order that he might divulge to him all the information that he had gathered. His knowledge proved to be so accurate that we were able to cover the ground in a short time with only minor losses. For this marvelous assistance Private Jack was recommended by the captain for a decoration. But he was never rewarded. Six years ago I saw the undecorated hero in a New York City hospital where he will probably have to spend his whole life.

After hearing the explanation of these actual situations, can you wonder that I am wary of decorations? You may say it makes no difference whether or not a man receives praise for his valor if he has really done the noble deed. But it does! The public looks upon a man who has been decorated as a genuine hero, whether he is or not. More than one man has been held up before the public as a pattern of bravery until later a humble, undecorated man has been found to be the deserver of the first man's honor. Some modest heroes are never discovered not rewarded; others, although their due honor is bestowed later, are obscure so long that the glory of reward has lost its full meaning to them.

We must conclude that one cannot judge what a man is by the decoration he wears any more than he can tell what a man is by the kind of clothes he wears. What is the cause of all this unjust distribution of decorations? Is it fraud; is it negligence; is it ignorance—or a combination of the three?

THE MESSAGE OF FAITH

Olive Benning

FIRST PRIZE STORY

"Father Martin," the boy's voice was pregnant with emotion as he spoke to the Jesuit priest. "Thou hast heard of the heretics in the Netherlands. Thou knowest they are breaking into the churches, wrecking the sacred altars, smashing the holy images, and doing all they can to profane the monasteries. "Tis most sacrilegious. Nor is that all. Last night-fall came word that they have mutilated and torn down the sacred Cathedral at Antwerp. "Tis a most dreadful act of the heretics."

Just as his speech was ended the magnificent door of the monastery creaked with its mighty weight moving on rusty hinges.

"A message for Father Martin," came the excited cry.

The handsome face of the tall dignified priest lighted with expectation as he took the message and read:

"Meet me at my headquarters at sun-down today ready to go with me to the Netherlands. Be prepared to use the Inquisition at Spain's command in order to put down the heretic insurrection. Bring the boy with you and come without delay.

The Duke of Alva."

" 'Tis King Phillip's command. May the Blessed Virgin help us! Brother Augustus, thou dost well to go with me. Prepare at once."

As the shadows began to gather about Alva's headquarters, two monks appeared. Each one carried a meager supply of equipment for his journey. The strong youthful figure of Father Martin was in the lead. His quick searching eyes, his firm chin, his intelligent forehead, all revealed the purpose that possessed him. The Duke had done well to choose Father Martin. He was known to be a devout Catholic, intolerant of heresy, and unwavering in his decisions. Behind him was the figure of a sturdy boy, Brother Augustus. Though Father Martin was little more than a boy he had taken upon himself the care of his orphaned nephew.

The two were greeted by a sentinel and ushered into a vast room. Here an official gave the Jesuit priest instructions as to what he should do in the Netherlands. He concluded with this statement: "Whatever may happen spare not the heretic. It is His Majesty King Philip's command."

Father Martin's voice became deep with emotion and feeling for his cause. "I swear I shall spare neither woman nor child, neither old age nor youth. No pleading, no threat shall receive lenience from me. As long as there be a single dog of a heretic on Netherland's soil I shall do my utmost to annihilate Protestantism. With my last drop of blood if necessary, will I buy freedom from heresy." With this determination in his breast and the boy under his powerful influence the Holy Father in Alva's company arrived in the Spanish Netherlands.

Several years had elapsed before the pair were seen again. Father Martin was a trusted and capable assistant to the Duke of Alva, whose name spelled destruction to the Protestants. Five years of enforcing the Inquisition upon helpless but heroic heretics, of inflicting torture upon them until many were killed had sharpened his handsome features, coarsened his mellow voice, and made him relentless in his inflictions. The death of an old woman from the wounds caused by the lash that he had decreed to be applied gave him no feeling of pity or remorse. The work of the devil must be exterminated in one way or another. Apparently this was the only way it could be done; therefore he had given himself to it without stint or reluctance.

"Father Martin," spoke Augustus on St. Bartholomew's Eve, "Is all prepared?"

"Yes, Brother Augustus, all is ready. Lie down now and rest for a time. They will wake us so that we may be ready before the bell rings at two o'clock."

"But, Father, I do not like this," said the boy. "It doth not seem right to murder these people so."

"Hark thee," came the gruff voice of the monk. "Tis the devil that tells thee so. They be heretics. King Philip does command us. Is he not the appointed of the Lord? It is rest that thou dost need. Lie thee down and pray to thy Saint who will allay all thy fears."

"Not so, Father Martin," he continued. "For a long time have I felt thus. Didst thou not see that poor old man the other day? His face did shine as the flames leaped about him, and I heard him saying that he saw Jesus. There have been many such. There must be something to make them so."

The face of the elder man hardened. "I am surprised that thou dost entertain such thoughts. These vile, undisciplined heretics do affect thy mind. For thy soul's welfare never harbor such thoughts again, much less speak them."

For a time all was quiet. Then suddenly the silence of the night was broken with the harsh and eerie sound of clanging bells. It was a signal to the forces of Alva to do their worst. Soon all was confusion. The commanding tones of the Jesuit officials were heard. Screams of terror and frenzy burst upon the air. The heretics were killed in cold blood. With shouts and prayers and cries for help the bloody massacre continued. Father Martin was in the midst of the fray. He gripped an old man tottering with age.

"'Tis not me that thou dost hurt, but my Christ," spoke the age done. "Yet, I do count it a privilege to die for my Lord."

Up spoke Brother Augustus, his youthful face pale with emotion and concern. "I beg of thee, Father Martin, let him go. 'Tis against God we are fighting.''

The Father looked at Augustus and lowered his up-raised weapon.

"'Tis of God," cried the boy, and he turned to the old man. "Sir, I pray thee tell me if I can possess your faith!"

"Son, 'tis through faith in Jesus Christ our sins are forgiven. Only believe."

"Is that all?" cried Augustus, "I do believe." So saying tears of joy coursed down his cheeks.

Father Martin raised his sword. With one more thrust the old man's life was ended.

The Jesuit turned to his nephew. "Wilt thou turn heretic too?" he sneered. "Thou art smaller than I thought thee to be. Renounce thy foolish heresy at once, Son. Thou seest what happens to the vile dogs such as this foul creature."

"Father," spoke Augustus, "if it be thy pleasure, 'tis well that I die for my faith, but I cannot renounce it. I know it is true."

"Thou must die." Dread seized the priest's heart. After all, Augustus was his nephew and more dear to him than his own life. Nevertheless he was a heretic. He knew it to be his duty to make the boy recant or take his life. Perhaps he would still give in. "Brother Augustus," he spoke gruffly, "thou dost not know what thou art about. Thou wilt surely renounce thy heresy."

Storm reigned within the youth. Then in calm and gentle tones he answered, "Father I would do anything for thee but this. I cannot deny my Christ. Father Martin, I shall gladly die for Him. Only turn thou to Him also!"

Father Martin groaned aloud. He could not leave a heretic alive, but he could not kill Augustus. Turning to an inferior near him he ordered the youth's execution. He dared not look upon the boy again but seized his sword and pushed through the frenzied mob about him. He was intent on murder to stifle his agony and remorse.

The pleading of his nephew was burned on his heart. Brother Augustus' luminous face haunted him as he strove to drown his feelings in the bloody warfare. In the shrieks of terror, the cries, the groans, the prayers he saw Augustus only. The dead were lying around about him. Streams of blood flowed in the streets. His gory robes were torn. His form was bent and dejected with the burden he bore on his heart. The blood-thirsty crowd became loathsome to him. Oh, what mad butchery! He knew himself to be wicked and cruel. He was part of this crazed mob. He had ordered Brother Augustus' death. Perhaps he were already dead.

"The boy is right," he cried. " 'Tis wrong. Would that I might still rescue him from death!" A terrified priest, he rushed blindly through the mob stumbling over dead and wounded. Now he was possessed of the fear of finding Augustus dead, now of hope that he might yet be alive. He reached the place where he had ordered the execution. There he saw him, an inert, prostrate figure with the light from a nearby blaze shining upon his peaceful face. Blood trickled from a ghastly wound in his chest. Was he gone?

Father Martin threw himself upon the stained earth beside him, put his arms about him, and whispered hoarsely, "Brother, art thou here? Speak to me once more!" The boy's eyes slowly opened as he continued, "Augustus, thou art not dying? Tell me thou art not!"

He bent to catch the last faint whisper. "Even so, Father, and it is well. But I would thou didst believe also."

"Lord, I believe!" cried the priest and he bowed his head in reverence.

For the past twenty-one years the Houghton Star has been sending forth its scintillating news and good cheer to students, faculty and alumni of Houghton College and Seminary. The Star was christened by Professor H. LeRoy Fancher, and was first issued in February, 1909, by the Union Literary Association of Houghton Seminary as a monthly magazine "devoted to educational purposes." It later became a semi-monthly newspaper with a special annual edition. In 1923 the paper began to be issued weekly and the 1924 Boulder, published by the Junior Class of the newly chartered College, became the annual.

This year a number of new and interesting factors have been introduced, and an attempt has been made to present all phases of school life in an unbiased manner.

STUDENT COUNCIL

The Student Council was organized in June, 1929. It is a deliberative body consisting of six Seniors, four Juniors, two Sophomores, two Freshmen and two Faculty members, the last two groups having no vote in Council matters. The Council started their work by planning and carrying out, with the aid of the Faculty, a program for Freshman Week. This proved a fine beginning and since then the Student Council has met twice a month, discussed student problems and offered many suggestions to the Faculty, no small number of which have been accepted and acted upon in full or in part.

The Student Council endeavors to act as an unprejudiced intermediary between the students and the Faculty. So far it has proved successful, and with the honest backing of the students will continue to do so for such a length of time as it is a necessary factor of school life.

THE ORCHESTRA

The Houghton College Orchestra is one of the outstanding organizations of the institution. Since the aim of the group this year was quality and not quantity, there are but eighteen members. This gives the balance and effect so desirable in an orchestra.

It is believed that the best place to become acquainted with the composers of classical music is in college, and for this reason, the Orchestra has attempted and mastered some of the most difficult compositions for the appreciation of the student body.

On December 17, 1929, the Orchestra gave a very enjoyable demonstration concert before the students of Rushford High School. It made its first public appearance in Houghton at the Library Benefit Concert with the beautiful and expressive Egmont Overture by Beethoven. A very successful concert was given in the early part of May.

The Orchestra functions under the competent and talented directorship of Alton M. Cronk, a College Senior and a graduate of the School of Music.

The Feder Plume or Writers' Club, is an organization whose primary aim is to develop style and technique in various forms of literary endeavor. One way to achieve this goal of individual development is to write and to criticize the products of the members of the club in the light of recognized authorities. The short, short story and the familiar essay have been studied this current year and the members of the club have derived considerable satisfaction in watching their "brain children" grow. This group has contributed several prize winning poems, essays and stories in past contests. The membership is small, yet it includes many of our most active students who have widely diversified interests. The organization includes both men and women and meets twice a month for an hour's study of a prepared program.

COLLEGE QUARTETTE

The Houghton College Quartette is a branch of the Men's Glee Club under the able direction of Mr. Leon Hines. This quartette was formed for the purpose of increasing interest in the college and promoting friendliness with neighboring communities through a representative college organization. This purpose has been admirably fulfilled since each member has been most generous with his time and talent. The quartette has sung on numerous and diversified programs during the year of its existence and has gained recognition and praise both for itself and for Houghton College.

The Music Club, one of the most interesting organizations in Houghton College, is in its third year of existence. The programs this year have been instructive as well as entertaining. Various programs including the works of Beethoven, Rachmaninoff and Tschaikowski have been given. One evening was devoted to the study of Norwegian music and another to the Russian composers.

Regular meetings are scheduled on Monday evenings, twice a month. Various programs consisting of solos, duets, quartettes and general discussion of composers, artists and famous compositions are arranged by the program committee.

The greatest aim of the Music Club is to develop in its members an appreciation and knowledge of classic music. Opportunity is given for the students to visit the nearby cities and hear the greatest musicians.

All persons deeply interested in music are entitled to join the Society. Many new members have been added to the Club in the past year. A very active future is anticipated because of the growing interest in the Society.

The Expression Club was founded in November, 1929, and has become a thriving institution. It was organized to help students, especially potential teachers, to gain experience in the arrangement and leaderships of programs. Incidentally it supplies excellent training in public speaking and platform deportment.

Programs are put on monthly to which the public is invited. These have proven to be very worthwhile and interesting. The members realize the value of the work and are very willing to co-operate in every way.

Several of the members show great promise and we are sure will be truly successful in this field of endeavor. We are glad to see the growth of the club and wish them the best of luck.

DEBATING CLUB

Whenever there is a group of people gathered together there are always some who love to argue. This is true of Houghton as well as of other places, but students of Houghton propose to do more than merely argue; to prove this a Debating Club has been organized.

The club has made a good beginning in its choice of Martha Dyer as President; Ellsworth Brown, Vice-President; Theda Thomas, Secretary; and Professor Stanley Wright as Faculty Advisor. The other charter members include Aletha Fairfield, Blanche Gage, Alfred Gross, Wesley Gleason, Hugh Thomas, and Devello Frank.

The club promises to give its members training in logical thinking and in the fundamental rules of debating. It is of benefit not only to its members but also to the school as it expects to take part in Inter-Collegiate Debates. In this way will be an advertising medium for the school.

When planning your Annual...

A seach new Staff undertakes the planning of a Year Book it is confronted with the same old problems which have perplexed the workers of previous years.

And yet, to each new Staff these planning and production problems are all new and ordinarily must be solved without the benefit of the experience of those who have solved the same problems in the past.

Much of this grief is avoided when the Staff works with The Du Bois Press. Out of our wealth of experience in building Year Books we have formulated certain well defined standards of procedure for the guidance of each new Staff.

To enjoy the full benefit of our Creative Service we recommend a preliminary conference between the members of the Staff and the Manager of our Year Book Department. This preliminary conference should be arranged at as early a date as possible and does not incur any obligation.... Our "idea" or planning department has created many out-standing and prize-winning Year Books.... May we be of service to you?
